guidelines were those issued in 1982 by the American National Standards Institute (ANSI). The FCC has also issued OST Bulletin No. 65, entitled "Evaluating Compliance with FCC-Specified Guidelines for Human Exposure to Radiofrequency Radiation" to aid in the radiation exposure analysis. This bulletin, based on the ANSI standard as well as current literature, provides detailed information for conducting an analysis including mathematical equations that can be used to determine compliance with the Commission's guidelines.

Verification of WBZZ's compliance with FCC-specified guidelines for human exposure to RF radiation was determined utilizing tables and equations set forth in OST Bulletin No. 65. There are no other stations located within 500 meters of WBZZ; therefore, WBZZ can be considered as a sole contributor directional two-bay antenna that is utilized only when the main antenna is not operating. With the maximum ERP of 22.5 kilowatts, radiated directly to two meters above ground, the power density contribution of the WBZZ(FM) auxiliary facility, assuming a worst case vertical field factor of 1.0, is 0.1220 mW/cm² or 12.20 percent of the ANSI recommended radiation limit. The operation of the WBZZ(FM) main or auxiliary antenna is in compliance with ANSI guidelines and FCC RF radiation exposure standards for RF energy with regard to the general public.

OCCUPATIONAL SAFETY

Access to the WBZZ antenna supporting tower base is restricted to authorized maintenance personnel only. WBZZ(FM) insures protection to station personnel working in the vicinity of the tower when maintenance of the transmitting antenna system is performed by reducing power and/or ceasing operation. Since there are no other broadcast facilities located within 500 meters of the WBZZ(FM) facility, coordinated effort with another station to reduce power and/or cease operation during times of maintenance is not necessary.

CONCLUSION

Accordingly, it is submitted that WBZZ(FM) complies with FCC Rules and Regulations regarding radiofrequency radiation protection standards.

This statement was prepared by me or under my direct supervision and is believed to be true and correct.
